TANK EXPLODES WRECKING HOUSE

The house of Louis Villain at Pancake Hollow, three miles from Highland, was wrecked Wednesday when an asetylene tank in the house exploded. The explosion blew out when an acetylene tank in the house caused the floor of the parlor and the adjoining room to sink through to the cellar and shook down nearly all the plaster on the walls of the rooms on the lower floor.

The explosion was caused by a leak in the tank, which was kept in the cellar, the gas being ignited by a lantern which one of the men of the place was using to find some articles in the cellar. He had opened the door leading to the cellar from the outside and was just entering when the force of the explosion carried him a distance of fully ten feet into the yard.

This occurred about ten o'clock in the morning and word was at once sent to Highland for the fire company which responded and by the use of the chemical extinguisher put out the small blaze which was started by the explosion.

The family were all in the rear of the house at the time consequently none was injured. The tank when it exploded crashed through the floor of the room directly over head.

No estimate can be made of the amount of damage done. It is feared that the building is near a complete wreck as the explosion caused the forcing out of the foundation which allowed the beams to sink.

The leak, it is said, had been noticed for several days and Tuesday one of the men made an effort to stop it. He tightened the joint and filled it with a preparation to keep the gas from leaking out, but it is thought that he probably loosened the pipe in another place.

TO ATTEND BOYS' WORK CONFERENCE

Secretary Robert J. Service of the joint committee of the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club which is making plans for the coming Boys' Work Conference said this morning that acceptances are now coming in rapidly from the various civic welfare organizations, societies, fraternal organizations, churches, etc.

The consistory of the First Reformed Dutch Church has appointed the following committee to act as its delegates at the conference: Edgar N. Palen, T. A. Bridges, Edgar E. Becker and Thomas Clearwater.

The Fair Street Reformed Church has appointed A. H. Wicks, Dr. Van Hoevenberg, Frank Newkirk and Miss J. Louise Miner.

Although the public will be invited to attend and participate in the conference and a large attendance is expected, the committee is asking each organization to appoint an official delegate in order that the conference may be definitely representative of all organized bodies having an interest in Kingston boys.

The plans for carrying on discussion in the conference provide for a twelve minute talk by the person introducing each topic on the program. This will be followed by two five minute talks by the leaders of discussion. From fifteen to thirty minutes will be reserved for discussion of each topic from the floor.

This procedure will mean that each topic will be introduced by carefully prepared discussion setting forth the important facts in connection with it and will be further developed by comment, discussion and further suggestions from the floor.

Experience in similarly conducted conferences has shown that this method always results in definite and practical suggestions.

MILTON MEETING WELL ATTENDED

First Meeting of Health Course Conducted By Home Bureau—1921 Committee Elected.

The first meeting of the series of six health talks to be given at Milton through the Home Bureau, cooperating with the State Department of Health was held in the Community House on Tuesday evening. In spite of the heavy rain storm, the meeting was attended by a large number of interested women. Dr. Palmer Bowdish was the speaker and his subject, "The Care of the Mother and Infant." Dr. Bowdish said that pre-natal care was not so new as many supposed, that as far back as 1883 two public health nurses in Boston with the courage of their convictions started out to teach pre-natal care and by their work had greatly decreased the death rate among both mothers and babies in the sections where they worked. After emphasizing the importance of pre-natal care, Dr. Bowdish then told of just what the care should consist, explaining fully the rules and directions to be followed and pointing out the grave dangers when this care was overlooked.

At the second meeting of this course Dr. Bowdish will take up the subject of the care of the child from infancy to six years. This meeting will take place on Tuesday evening, December 14th in the Community House.

At the close of the doctor's talk, a Home Bureau business meeting followed. At this time Miss Stuart, the Home Bureau Manager, explained the working of the Home Bureau Organization and the election of the 1921 Milton Home Bureau Committee took place. The following were elected: Mrs. C. J. Hepworth, chairman; Mrs. Edward Young, Mrs. C. C. Furgeson, Miss Sarah M. Clark, Mrs. George Mertes, Mrs. Dayton. Miss Stuart also spoke briefly of the 1921 Home Bureau program and since the Milton Home Bureau has taken up the subject of Health, spoke of other health meetings that could be arranged and particularly of the Keeping Fit lectures as given by Dr. C. C. Croff, also of the State Department of Health.

After some little discussion those present voted to schedule a health meeting with Dr. Croff as the speaker on Tuesday evening, November 30 in the Community House. In connection with this lecture, moving pictures or lantern slides will be shown.

Everyone voted the meeting an interesting one, and well worth making the effort for even a stormy night.

ROBERSON ADMITS REVOLTING CRIME

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Baltimore, Nov. 18.—Charles Roberson, a 16 year old negro, was rushed to the Baltimore city jail early today for safe keeping after confessing, the police say, to one of the most revolting crimes in the history of the state.

The youth is said to have acknowledged that on Monday he attacked Mrs. Arthur Hightman in Frederick county, with a hatchet, after which he criminally assaulted her and then set fire to her clothing. He had first saturated her clothing with oil, according to the authorities. The woman died yesterday.

So intense was the feeling against the negro that Frederick county authorities rushed him here for safekeeping. He expressed relief when he was safely lodged in the city jail.

The negro had been employed about the Hightman home. Mrs. Hightman was in a semi-conscious condition when found by her husband. Before she died she told her relatives that the negro had assaulted here and poured oil on her clothing. The Hightmans have a 19 months old child who was playing in an adjoining room when the mother was attacked.

"If one ministry at Athens is unwelcome the allies probably will see to it that another is chosen."

OSWEGO SAILS TO JUNK HEAP

Famous Old Hudson River Tow Boat Bought by Kingston Scrap Iron & Metal Company to be Junked—To Overhaul Albany at Island Dock—Other Notes.

The famous old side-wheeler Oswego, of the Cornell fleet of tow boats, has been bought by the Kingston Scrap Iron & Metal Company, of No. 160 Hasbrouck avenue, and has sailed her last trip—to the home of dead ships, the junk heap. The Oswego was towed to the flats at the Terry Brothers' brickyard and work of junking her was started Wednesday.

Next to the Norwich, the old Ice King, the Oswego was probably the most famous tow boat in the history of the Hudson river. She was built in 1844, while the Norwich was built in 1837. The Oswego was long in active service towing on the Hudson river, but had not been placed in commission in several seasons. The Norwich is still berthed at the stone dock in Ponckhockie, but it would not be surprising if she was shortly sold for junk as her towing career is over.

The steamer Albany, of the Hudson River Day Line, which is berthed at the Sunflower dock in the Rondout creek, will shortly be towed to the Island Dock shipyard of the Kingston Shipbuilding Corporation and will be thoroughly overhauled for next season.

The severe wind storm of Wednesday night held up both the north and south bound tows on the Hudson river, but as far as known no damage was done on the river.

DIGNITY OF PRODUCTIVE LABOR MAIN THING TO REALIZE IN READJUSTMENT

No Substitute for Reward of Merit, Says Harding Before Sailing for Panama---But Merit Must Be Sure of Its Reward--Nation Must Renounce Extravagance and Learn Anew Lessons of Thrift.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 18.—"Neither our own nor the world's salvation is to be worked out through any patent nostrum," President-elect Warren G. Harding declared in a speech before the Chamber of Commerce here this afternoon, in which he discussed the industrial and economic situation, before sailing for Panama.

"One hundred per cent production, minimized waste," and "rational readjustment" offer the remedy for the industrial and economic ills of the United States, the president-elect said.

After declaring there has been "a wild contemplation of earnings, whether in wages or dividends" Senator Harding made an appeal for the "ideal relationship where men may labor with a soul in their tasks" and for a realization of "the dignity of productive labor."

"Concord among Americans, South, Central and North," was urged by the president-elect.

"Somehow I feel that the Western Hemisphere is our special field of influence and trade," Senator Harding said. "Our trade routes by the sea to the south ought to be as dependable as our rail routes. Bind our friendship with the ties of trade and we shall make it indissoluble.

"Our greatness at home lies in a very intelligent, resolute people," the president-elect said. "In a land not ravished by war, at enmity with no people, envying none, coveting nothing, seeking no territory, striving for no glories which do not become a righteous nation.

"This republic cannot, will not fail, if each of us but does his part. If we but work, use thrift and seek the understanding which contains mutuality of interest no difficulties can long abide. We cannot hope for war activities and excesses and pre-war costs but we can give and take and find the rational readjustment. Such a solution cannot come out of the greedy thoughts of the profiteer or the revolutionary agitation of those who would destroy. These are but surface disturbances. We choose the deep and ever onward currents of normal America for the course of the republic.

"With one hundred per cent production and minimized waste we may make the reconstruction and establish a sure footing. We must be more concerned with the substance in reward of activity than in its coin measurement. And our concern must be in a dependable prosperity which is righteously shared.

"In a land of opportunity, with standards of wage and living the best in the world, I want to go on in good conscience until we evolve the ideal relationship where men may labor with a soul in their tasks. There is no substitute for the reward of merit, there never can be, but in the scales of justice we must see that reward balances evenly with merit.

"We want good fortune a common possession in America. We want the cotton grower of the south to have his becoming reward with the wool grower and the wheat farmer of the north. We want southern factories to be attuned to the music of the mills of the north. We want your ports to send their cargoes under the American flag, to bear the messages of peace and good will to all ports of the earth. There is no sectionalism in righteous American ambitions.

"I believe the American people have come to realize that we must face momentous problems—world problems but more particularly our own problems—and must face them with resolute courage and practical wisdom and patriotic determination. There must be no reason for pause, no excuse for despair, no place for pessimism. Inevitably there must be reconstruction, unavoidably there will be readjustment. And the old order never will return, the incalculable sacrifice would be vain if the old order were even sought.

"Surely we are going to be called upon nationally, collectively and individually to renounce extravagances and learn anew the old lessons of thrift and providence.

"The big thing for all America to realize now and always is the dignity of productive labor. No matter how humble the producers are the makers of the essentials of civilization and we must, each and all of us, help and discharge our duty of producing for the world, or of ministering to the needs or comfort of progress of mankind."

VISITORS AT ROTARY CLUB

In addition to violin solos by Samuel Gardner the Rotary Club at its luncheon on Wednesday was entertainded by a brief address by the Rev. Frank Eckersen, just returned from China where he has been a missionary for 17 years, who is to deliver an address this evening in the Fair Street Reformed Church. Mr. Eckersen spoke of the systematic work of German propagandists in China at the beginning of the war, when newspapers containing accounts of mythical German victories were circulated before any battle had been fought, and German conquest of the world was predicted in detail. Only most strenuous work by diplomats aided by British and American missionaries kept China on the side of the Allies, opening her vast resources in material and man power for their use.

Such a gathering as a Rotary luncheon, Mr. Eckersen said, would be impossible in China or any other non-Christian country. Only in Christian civilization will men meet in a friendly, social spirit, various trades and professions mingling in good fellowship. China is a vast potential market, but not until awakened and lifted to civilization is she in position to buy from us. Until China is modernized and Christianized her 400,000,000 people are a menace to the world, greater than most persons realize.

Another visitor introduced was Mr. Reben, manager of the Barth Company plant in this city. The club welcomed Charles Ramsey, who returned last week from the second trip he has made to his native Scotland this year, bringing his sister with him and who is contemplating another trip next June to attend the International Rotary Convention in Edinburg.

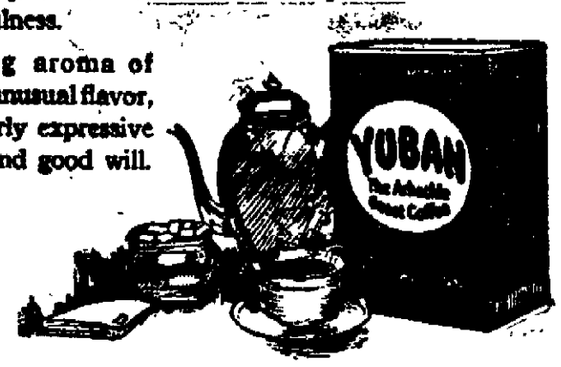
The art of complimenting friends with the coffee you serve

A PLEASANT little custom has arisen for complimenting one's inner circle of friends when they call. It is the serving of coffee of rare and exquisite flavor.

In New York, where the demands of social life are perhaps more exacting than in any other city, Yuban is the coffee most often served to one's personal friends.

We have heard a charming New York hostess say, when she served Yuban in this way, "I remembered that you especially like this coffee of mine." And her guests were quick to understand the compliment of her thoughtfulness.

The cheering aroma of Yuban, its rich, unusual flavor, make it peculiarly expressive of friendliness and good will.



Do you know where the purest and best flavored maple sugar comes from? The flavor of Maple Karo tells you

Over a thousand tons of rich maple sugar from Vermont and Canada to make Maple Karo for the American family

The American housewife endorses Maple Karo this way:

Over five million cans were consumed last year. This is a greater sale, by far, of any kind of maple syrup sold.

If you are particular about the syrup you buy, and the price you pay for it—the new Maple Karo is your kind of syrup.

Perfectly delicious in rich maple tang—yet very moderate in price. So moderate that you can serve it every day, every meal. And all grocers everywhere have it.

Go to your grocer today. Get one can of Maple Karo. Try it just once. If you are not absolutely satisfied return it—and your grocer will give you back your money.

Remarkable Checker Boards.

Probably the most extraordinary checker board in the world was constructed at St. Leonards, in Sussex, England, in 1891. It was made of solid bricks of concrete, three feet thick, and its surface covered an area of 625 feet. The pieces were moved by hooked iron rods, making the game of value as a physical as well as a mental exercise. A checker board which was presented to Bismarck at the height of his fame is said to have been the most costly thing of the kind ever made. The squares were made of gold and silver inlaid upon an ebony case. There were 32 checkers, 32 of gold and 32 of silver. In the center of each gold piece was a ruby. While each of the silver pieces was adorned with a diamond. The outfit was valued at that time at about $100,000.

Makers of imaginary cabinets are having their inning while the cabinet maker himself is gone a-fishing.

One of the interesting features of the election was the evident disinclination of women to vote to put women into important offices

In one year in every four Thanksgiving would be more than a name with a much larger number of people if it came before the first Tuesday in November.

Wonderful to tell, a Buffalo landlady refuses to admit women with lapdogs to her apartments and insists on having tenants with children

A movement is on foot to increase the congressional salary, now $7,500, to $10,000 or $12,500, but voters who were promised decreased taxation are not likely to be very keen for this development of the program

Thirteen years ago, after long waiting, the Englishman came into the right to marry his deceased wife's sister, but an Englishwoman is not yet allowed to marry her deceased husband's brother A bill to give her this permission has just been introduced.

The Costa Rican wife of Herbert P. Crane of Chicago denies that she eats lizards and that her favorite table delicacy is "eight pork chops." Probably there are few people who care what the real trouble is, but such novel grounds for divorce are of some little passing interest.

Leon Daudet, member of the Chamber of Deputies and leader of the Royalist party, although he has fought eleven duels, has now refused a challenge on the ground that "duelling is a foolish practice and there is no place for it in France since the war"—which shows that even the Royalists were shaken up by the great tragedy.

It would appear that only by kindling new fires in other countries can the Russian flame be kept alive, for, after repeated failures at Ellis Island, Bolshevist agitators are desperately striving to get into the United States through Holland The report comes from Rotterdam that an attache of the American consulate there was offered a bribe of $250 each to let six Bolshevist emissaries ship to the United States.

Already the people of this country are feeling more comfortable, knowing that the Republican party is in control and that whatever comes it will be handled with the greatest measure of intelligence. There ma be some rocky periods but the various problems will be met fearlessly and in a way that will mean ultimate relief to all. The leaders of the party realize the responsibility which the party faces and they will not fail to live up to what is expected. The people gave the Republican party a vote of confidence that carries with it a tremendous task.

There is one thing certain: The farm will be given proper consideration in the nation and in the state. There will be a "dirt" farmer in Washington and .. agricultural department in the state will not be used as a political football. Harding knows something about rural life and Miller is not lacking in knowledge of the farm. This assures measure that will help the farming communities rather than legislation that will be disturbing to the agricultural interests. This will eventually mean increased production and with enlarged production will come reduced cost to the consumer.

The people of this state will look forward with interest to the first message to the legislature by Governor Miller. It is expected that he will take up the questions which he believes should receive early attention, and that he will give reasons why legislation should be favored carrying out his recommendations. That his suggestions will be safe and sane is not doubted, and it is confidently expected that what he says will be clear and distinct, and that the reasons will be convincing. The governor-elect is not a man to waste words and those who know feel sure that he will be ready to fight for what he thinks is right.

HERE AND THERE ABOUT THE TOWN

"I Don't Know What World Is Coming To," Is Expression Commonly Heard These Days From Lips Of Those Who Forget World Is O. K., Its the Individual.

"I see by the papers where they have dug up nine skeletons in a cellar in a house near Syracuse, but the authorities think they were killed in 1807, ' remarked the customer, dropping the paper he was reading

"So I read," repied the busy barber.

"But I hardly think they will make an attempt to run down the murderers," added the customer

"Hardly," replied the barber, "they have got too big a start"

"Real funny you are," retorted the customer.

"Well there is no use in being serious these days," replied the barber, "for it never got a man anything by being sad all the time"

"Oh well," retorted the customer, "I don't know what the world is coming to anyway."

"That's the trouble with a lot of you guys," retorted the barber, "and you overlook the fact the world is all right it's the individual"

"What do you mean?" asked the customer

"It's this way," explained the barber, "the world is just as good today as it ever was. In fact it's a better world, for you or I would not want to go back to the days when before we could enjoy a smoke we had to light our pipe with the aid of a flint"

"Maybe," mused the customer.

"No maybe about it," replied the barber, "for to my mind the world is a better place to live in today than it ever was before"

"I fail to get it yet," murmured the customer with an aggravating grin

"You get it all right," retorted the barber, "but you are like a lot of others, you are too stubborn to give in when you are wrong"

"If you want to get the best out of life in this world," he continued "it is up to you. Every individual has a perfect right to go around looking for the dark side, but he is a chump, when he only has to look for the bright side and find it"

"Well," said the customer, "you may be right at that."

"It makes me tired to hear folks say that they don't know what the world is coming to," continued the barber, "for nine cases out of ten they have eaten something that don't agree with them or they failed to get what they wanted"

"Well retorted the customer, "you can't always get what you want."

"And a lot of times when you do get it you don't want it," replied the barber.

Its Application to Charge More For School Tickets.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Nov. 17.—H H. Flemming, attorney for the Ulster & Delaware Railroad, today withdrew the company's application for permission to increase its rate for trip school tickets at a hearing before Chairman Charles B. Hill, of the public service commission, second district. The company wanted to charge 46 trip school tickets at the rate of 3 cents a mile.

Chairman Hill asked Mr Flemming why the school ticket rate was not included in the petition of the company for right to increase its mileage rate and Mr. Flemming replied that the school rate was a special ticket rate. The business, he said, was not very heavy.

Chairman Hill then read about ten letters from the residents and school principals at Grand Gorge, Roxbury and Hobart protesting against an increase in the school ticket rate, stating that with an increased fare there were many children who would be denied education privileges beyond the district school.

"Your application does not appeal very strongly to me," said Chairman Hill.

Mr. Flemming announced that he would apply to withdraw the company's application. This course, Chairman Hill said, the commission will consent to. The application will be closed on the commission's records.

WHAT AND WHERE VITAMINES ARE

"What are vitamines?" This is a question asked repeatedly since the importance of these compounds in foods has come into prominence, but no definite answer has yet been given. Investigations by scientists at universities, agricultural experiment stations, and institutions for medical research have revealed much information regarding the function of vitamines in body maintenance and building, and the parts of the various foods in which they are to be found.

That vitamines are compounds absolutely essential in the food, in order to maintain the weight of the body and produce growth, has been definitely proved. The lack of vitamines causes deficiency diseases, so named because they are due to lack of something in the diet. Vitamines are present and are needed in such small quantities in the food that chemists have not yet been able to isolate them from the many other compounds which are in foods. For this reason, we know very little of the actual character of vitamines.

According to a statement by Dr. Carl O Johns, in charge of nutrition work in the bureau of chemistry, U. S department of Agriculture, vitamines have been classified into three different types depending upon the functions which they have in promoting well-being and growth.

The first type is known as water-soluble vitamines, and these are necessary in order to obtain growth from food. Lack of these causes beri-beri, which manifests itself by disease of the nervous system and by other symptoms. These vitamines are found in seeds, in green plants, in certain bulbs and fleshy roots and fruits, and in milk and eggs, as well as in certain organs in the animal body. The seeds referred to include beans, nuts and the various cereal grains. When cereals are very highly milled in order to obtain a very fine white flour, a large part of the vitamines may be removed. Vitamines are also lost when rice is polished in order to remove the outer layers which contain most of the vitamines. It is for this reason that a diet consisting mainly of polished rice may cause beri-beri, while unpolished rice doe not cause this disease.

The second type is known as fat-soluble vitamines, and these are found in butter, eggs, milk, and in certain animal organs such as the heart, kidneys, and liver, and to some extent in other fats as well as in green vegetables. They also exist in smaller quantities in certain weeds. When fat-soluble vitamines are absent from the diet animals and men are subject to a disease of the eyes, which appears to be related to xerophthalmia and which, if prolonged, may produce blindness.

The third type is known as anti-scorbutic vitamines—that is, those which prevent scurvy, which manifests itself by disease of the bones as well as in other ways. These vitamines are found in oranges, grapefruit, lemons and other citrus fruits, and in green vegetables such as tomatoes, spinach and lettuce, and in eggs and raw milk. The drying of vegetables frequently destroys the activity of the anti-scorbutic vitamines. The best source of vitamines is in the leafy parts of vegetables, and this is one of the reasons why spinach, lettuce, and cabbage are valuable foods.

ADVERTISING SOCIAL

Held By Girls of Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Class.

The second regular monthly social of the members of the ladies' gymnasium class was held Wednesday night in the rooms at the Y. M. C. A. The committee in charge composed of Mrs. Edward Tongue, Erma Rabel and Florence Tappen arranged for an advertising social and the members were all there dressed as some advertisement. The Gold Dust Twins were there competing with Mrs. O. D. Cleanser. Aunt Jemima was tossing pan cakes around and had a hard time disposing of her goods as the Zuzu Kid was present as well as two Campbell Soup Kids, the Uneeda Biscuit girl, Red Cross nurses and many others. Various games were played that furnished group amusement for all. Special features of the program were dances by Miss Riccobono, music by Mlle. Rabel and readings by a well known spiritualistic medium. A bountiful luncheon was served by the committee in charge.

For several months the girls of the gymnasium class have been arranging a monthly social and appoint a different committee each month that so far have provided a well diversified and interesting program.

GARDNER PROVES BIGGER THAN EVER

Plays Own Ambitious Composition and Shows That He is Even More Master of Violin Than When Heard Here Before.

Samuel Gardner, American violinist, composer, sometime conductor, having put his violin in the most perfect "tune" at St. Mary's Hall Wednesday evening, chose for the first number on his program a composition that put his audience in tune with music, so that for the rest of the performance his listeners were in a state of sympathetic receptivity.

The opening number, the "Concerto in A Minor," by Vivaldi, struck the musical key note quite like a Haydn composition in the Allegro movement, and instantly one recognized in the crisp, virile, yet round and beautiful tone, that inspiring—never over-stimulating—energy of which Samuel Gardner is a past master. In the Largo movement, the artist's violin talked as an intimate yet forceful friend might talk. The Presto was sprightly, varied, big in certain passages.

This was the first time that the majority of Mr. Gardner's Kingston friends had heard him play one of his own larger compositions, and they listened with a lofty expectation to his "Concerto in E Minor, Op. 18." It is a work of such merit, such seriousness with the thought of the composer reaching into the past, undaunted in the present and out of the past and present looking hopefully forward, that it must of necessity demand several hearings for one to begin to grasp all of its beauty and portent. Judged from a first hearing, the "Declamando con Molto Appassionato," seemed the assured affirmation, founded upon past history, "God's in His heaven; all's well with the world." Mr. Gardner did not spare himself in even the smallest degree as far as technical difficulties were concerned.

Like listening to music in a vast and very beautiful cathedral was the "Aria" by D'Ambrosio.

No greater contrast could be imagined than the "Valse Bluette," by Drigo. Tripping, rhythmic and brilliant in character.

Vivid in coloring, graceful and full of emotion was the Caprice Viennois by Kreisler.

Energy that does not rest becomes nervous hysteria, and there certainly is nothing hysterical about Samuel Gardner. The quiet, melodic beauty of the "Chanson Indove" by Rimsky-Korsako was immeasuresbly restful, with its absence from undue haste and hurry and its sweet song.

Wieniawski is always a delightful and most satisfactory violin composer, and the "Caprice in A Minor" was played with all that beauty of musicianship of which Mr. Gardner is possessed.

The program closed with another composition by the artist, "From the Canebrake" so full of plantation rhythm and swing and plantation joy as to quite fascinate any audience, and Mr Gardner was enthusiastically recalled, playing a delightful short Mozart number as his farewell.

Special mention must be made of the masterly accompanying of Louis Spielman, whom the audience quite agreed with Mrs Gardner in considering one of the best to be found today, and that is high praise, for Mr. Gardner is exacting when it comes to musical excellence.

This was the first of Harry P Dodge's series of concerts this season.

T. Jefferson Coolidge Dead.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Boston, Nov. 16.—T. Jefferson Coolidge, former United States minister to France, philanthropist, successful mill and railroad executive, is dead, aged 89.

The mystery of the slaying of Maree Ramey and Lillian Thompson, New York actresses, whose bodies were found in Grant Park, Chicago, has been solved by the confession of one of the three men responsible for the crime, according to the police. Two of the men are under arrest. According to the confession as described by the police, the men met the two girls at 10 o'clock at night. Drinking and an automobile ride through the Tenderloin followed. While driving through the park, the chauffeur, who made the confession, claims the girls became boisterous and the two men riding with them in the rear pushed them out. The police report the two girls died from exposure and alcholism.

STABS ATTENDANTS.

Middletown State Hospital Cobbler, Former Insane Patient, on Rampage.

In an unbalanced condition following a five-day drunk and infuriated, he claims, by being struck by an attendant, Louis C. Bath—the name he goes by—on Tuesday night stabbed two attendants at the Middletown state hospital. Later, when two officers of the Middletown police department grappled with him to take from him the pocket knife with which he had done the cutting, his own little finger on the right hand was cut to the bone.

The two men cut are Anthony McCreedie, the man whom Bath claims provoked the assault, and Mr. Livingston. The condition of neither is serious, although McCreedie has six abdominal stabs. The fight started between the former and Bath. The latter was implicated when he sought to help his fellow attendant.

In the Middletown jail Bath said that on Friday he became intoxicated and from that day until Tuesday had drank 12 bottles of whiskey. He is an Italian and deaf, having lost his hearing many years ago in the Italian-African war. He was a cobbler at the institution. For 16 years he was in the hospital, as one of the insane patients. In May of this year he was discharged as sane and has since been on the pay roll. He is 55 years old.

The physicians at the hospital state that the assault was unprovoked and was deliberate on the part of Bath who sought to avenge himself because he believed McCreedie had reported him on several occasions for drinking.

The board of supervisors after roll call Wednesday evening took a recess for fifteen minutes as a number of members were engaged in the committee room discussing matters with the committee on equalization which had not finished its work. It will probably report at this evening's session.

BARTH & COMPANY "MAKING GOOD"

Alterations to Plant Provide for Expansion—Equipment Held Up by Delay of Makers—To Make Refrigerators in Spring.

Steady progress is being made at the Barth & Co. plant toward getting everything in running order, but much still remains to be done in the way of building and equipment before the plant can be operated at anything like full capacity. Brown & Dressel are putting in a steam heating equipment as rapidly as possible, but it is feared that the plant may have to shut down for a few weeks should the weather turn very cold, in order to give opportunity to complete the installation. The L. F. Bannon Co. has completed the sewer and water instalation and Mr. Van Aken has finished a new roof.

All word done or planned is of sufficient magnitude to provide for extension of the present buildings and plans for these extensions have grown much larger since officials of the company have had further opportunity to know and appreciate Kingston. The electric power installation at first contemplated was of 25 horsepower. This estimate was increased from time to time until finally equipment for 125 horsepower was installed. A smoke-stack 65 feet in height was ordered, but new plans contemplate one 85 feet in height.

The various officials and foremen who have come here to reside or on trips of inspection are greatly pleased with Kingston and the company has manifested its appreciation of the aid given by the Chamber of Commerce by taking 10 memberships in that body. Charles Mossl, superintendent of all the plants of the company, and Mr. Reben, manager of the Kingston plant, are frequent visitors and both contemplate residing here permanently. Mr Reben stated to a Freeman reporter yesterday that it is hoped to have a wood working plant in operation by spring making refrigerators and containers for them

Even in the present incomplete state considerable goods are being made here. Recently a carload of ranges was shipped for use in what is to be the finest and most expensive apartment house in the world, a building at 72nd street and Fifth avenue, New York city, in which some of the apartments will command a rental of $30,000 a year. Another shipment of ranges to Hong Kong will be made this week and several motor truck loads of goods have recently been sent out.

As an instance of the delay met with in installing equipment, Mr. Dehn stated that one machine, weighing 14 tons, ordered last June, is now about to be shipped to Kingston.

To Preach at Flatbush.

The Rev. Willard Dayton Brown is expected to speak next Sunday morning in the Flatbush Church and in the Grange Hall at the Sunday school service in the afternoon at 3 o clock.

THREE NURSES GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Graduating Exercises of Kingston City Hospital Training School at Knights of Columbus Hall—Dr. Chandler Speaks.

Three nurses were graduated from the training school of the Kingston City Hospital Wednesday night, the exercises being held in the Knights of Columbus hall. The members of the class were the Misses Esther Wood, Bessie Bennett and Florence Baxter.

The exercises which were presided over by Judge James A. Betts, president of the board of managers, were opened with a prayer by the Rev. Frank B. Seeley, D. D., pastor of the Fair Street Reformed Church. Judge Betts then presented Dr A. A. Stern who as secretary of the medical staff gave a brief history of the training school. Dr. Stern said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen and Members of the Class of 1920—The honor is again granted me as Secretary of the Medical Staff of the Hospital, to give a brief history of the Training School.

During the past year since our last exercise, our classes have been fairly well filled which is not a condition that the majority of training schools are able to state.

During this period the nurses training has been very intensive, as shown by our annual report, during which time there were nearly 13,000 days of treatment, which was divided into medical, surgical and other special cases.

The medical profession, as well as the public, recognizes the fact of the extreme shortage of nurses and various plans which have been, and are being proposed to overcome this condition.

During the past year the legislature has enacted a legal statute to nurses aids, which we hope this will relieve the situation.

Many causes are due to produce this shortage.

First—The great demand made by schools, public institutions and industrial centers for nurses

Second—The desire which frequently comes early in the life of a graduate to change her name from Miss to Mrs and we thereby lose a good nurse and some fortunate man acquires a good wife. This of course means that these factors will prevent equalizing the supply and demand.

Ladies of the class, on behalf of your teachers, superintendent, and her assistants, I heartily extend to you our best wishes for your success, and when life's work is finished and as you enter the Kingdom of Heaven, where there is neither pain nor suffering, the guardian angel will welcome you with the salutation, "Well done good and faithful servant."

The principal address was delivered by Dr. George F. Chandler. His speech in full was as follows:

To address a graduating class is always an honor, but to address a class of young ladies who have become nurses, is an honor that I as a physician particularly appreciate, because a doctor knows as no one else does, how hard you have worked to reach this goal, and how important is the profession you have chosen for your own.

In my humble judgment there is no profession among the many that now offer themselves to women that can equal the one of being a graduate nurse. I mean this for the average young woman. There are of course cases where some extraordinary ability will enable a woman to reach great success in other lines, but these are very rare. The nursing profession offers opportunities for any intelligent, interested, healthful girl to make for herself a successful career.

She is really a free lance. She is not tied down to any one place or among any one class of people, for there is work for a good nurse in any part of the country that she fancies.

She is able to work when she wants to, and rest when she needs to between cases—for there is little enough rest when she is at work. Her work too is of a broader nature than almost any other.

A teacher is tied down to certain hours of very monotonous labor. Not long hours to be sure, but she is in constant association with immature minds. There is little variety in her work and it is underpaid.

A girl who does book-keeping or other office work finds herself even more closely confined. Her hours are long and her work is seldom such as to throw her in contact with people, except the few with whom her routine duties associate her.

A nurse on the contrary, has the opportunity of meeting people in all walks of life. She is in a position where she can add constantly to her knowledge, her experience, and her culture. She can broaden her views through a wide acquaintance, and make friends who are of value.

If she desires to get married (and some girls do) she has wider opportunities of meeting the right man than any other profession offers.

There is money enough in the profession too, but this should be the least consideration for a high-minded nurse or physician, for after all, the older one gets, the more one realizes that the greatest satisfaction in this world lies in doing things for others. This fact is older than Christianity, but no religion can teach it as well as age and experience can.

While there appear to have been great advances made in medicine in recent years, as a matter of fact ultimate results show that the only real change after all has been in examination in its broadest sense, and preventive medicine, which is a part of it.

Further advance in medicine can only be brought about by propaganda along these lines among the people at large. And to whom can people look for such instruction if not to a nurse or a doctor? A doctor should be free of a routine, and not a mere giver of pills.

I believe that it also will be the duty of every nurse also not only to apply her knowledge to her cases, but to all in every sense of the word a teacher.

A nurse is constantly importuned by people on all subjects pertaining to health. What she says is of extreme importance and has a wide influence. Her explanations must be simple, so that they may be easily understood and remembered.

Everyone wants to know how to keep well. The way to keep well can best be explained by telling about disease, how it comes, and its treatment.

Roughly speaking, the body with its bony framework and its organs is covered with skin and lined with mucous membrane. This skin and this mucous membrane are nature's great defensive mechanism. What can happen to a normal body so defended? Only three things. They are: 1st, injuries, 2nd, infections, 3rd, new growth. That is all. Injuries come from accidents and the word accident covers everything from the minutest pin prick or a burn to the biggest automobile smashup. Big accidents need not be discussed here.

When nature's defensive mechanism is broken anywhere, then infection can get in, so the crux of the subject of keeping well is to keep the defense unbroken.

Our bodies are covered and surrounded on all sides by minute organisms that can only be seen by the microscope. These organisms are the producers of disease provided they can break through nature's defense.

Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, tetanus, diphtheria, yellow fever, blood-poisoning, pneumonia, all come from these micro-organisms that have entered the body because of some break in its defense.

By new growth is meant any abnormal swelling in the body which may be due to inflammation or not. If not due to an inflammation, these new growths are commonly called tumors and may be of two kinds. Those that grow steadily and invade every tissue by contiguity are called malignant tumors, for example the cancer. Those that grow but have a capsule or covering about them and do not kill of themselves, are called benign tumors. No one knows the cause of a tumor although there are many theories.

Now if the human body is injured by an accident, invaded by an infection with its attendant results or afflicted with a new growth (the only three things that can be the matter with it) it requires treatment. Treatment is of three kinds, medical, surgical and nursing.

What can a medical man do? He can first diagnose. This is the most important thing of all—correct diagnosis, but after this there are only a few actual things that he can do to assist nature, the real doctor. He has a specific for syphilis, for anemia and for malaria. He can make the body alkaline. He can give a purge or an emetic. He can relieve pain or give a sleeping potion, and he has a great heart stimulant and heart food in digitalis. He can cure diphtheria and tetanus by antitoxin, prevent typhoid and smallpox by vaccination, and cure perhaps one or two other diseases by inoculation. These things are all that he can actually do in a broad sense.

The surgeon can patch up injuries, set bones, adjust splints, remove tumors, relieve obstructions, open abscesses and remove diseased tissue. That's all he can do.

Nurses carry out orders, watch and make comfortable the patient. This is a very brief synopsis of the great subjects of disease and treatment. There are of course countless variations that make diagnosis hard, and render treatment unavailing. For the physician and nurse play always against the one absolutely sure thing on earth, and that is—death. But wonder upon wonders, since the civil war, statistics show that the average length of life in this country has been prolonged fifteen years. And this is due as I said in the beginning, to sanitation and to preventive medicine.

Now—how to keep well. This is a subject of interest to every person in the world. Aside from an accident which may happen to anybody at any time, how can we keep our bodies in good condition?

First, last and all the time, an honest, clear-thinking well-trained doctor should be consulted at reasonably frequent intervals. Most dentists instruct their patients to call upon them once or twice a year simply to ascertain if the teeth are all right or need attention.

Is it not of equal importance that the condition of the body be inspected as often? The doctor can detect anything out of the normal and so nature's defense can be maintained. Too frequently a disease has made inroads because the person sufferint from it thought the matter too trival to consult a physician about.

Any break in the skin should be given care. A scratch may mean blood poisoning. The mouth and nose should be watched—for bad teeth may cause, rheumatism, heart disease and nervous troubles as a result of infection. Tonsils and adenoids the great filters of disease, should be removed, particularly in children.

The skin should be kept clean and clean clothes should be worn next to it. If one is clean on the outside, he certainly should be clean on the inside. So cooked food, pared fruit, well done meats should be eaten. Uncooked vegetables should only be eaten at home, where one can be sure that they are thoroughly washed. When traveling or eating in restaurants of doubtful cleanliness, only cooked food should be eaten. Thought should be given to milk, for no milk is really clean.

Vaccination against disease should be practiced by all, especially by those who travel. Quarantine laws should be obeyed, and willingly, for the good of the community. Local health board rules should be carefully followed out.

All tumors, no matter how small, should be removed. This is an absolute rule.

Since all doctors are not good and all diseases do not yield to treatment, people frequently become discouraged, and as everybody is a bit superstitious, there eventuall those who make positive statements and promise miraculous cures. They join cults, they are rubbed and twisted at great expense, and should time and nature effect a cure during this process, it's the last thing done that gets the credit.

The patient's frame of mind has much to do with his condition. This should be watched and taken into account by both doctor and nurse.

The human body is like a lamp. If it is filled with good oil it burns evenly and steadily. If it contains bad oil it flickers and sputters in the burning.

Just so a man. If his body fluids be normal, he will function normally, but should his blood be charged with poison or his body with infection, he may do queer things, become depressed and his mind will not function properly.

The whole subject may be considered in a broad sense, not from concrete cases, for to improve health in general is a mass problem not an individual one.

The higher the civilization, the fewer children there are, hence more understanding care can be given to the child to preserve and improve the race.

In China where there are no health laws, nature produces big families because so many die from disease.

The individual must not be foolishly afraid of disease, for that will not keep disease away. Nothing is worse than a person who is constantly clapping a thermometer into his mouth, taking his pulsebeat, or worrying about his blood pressure. Every nurse should discourage this sort of fussy watchfulness. Let him rather learn the principles of keeping well, and abide by them as a matter of habit, being careful not to let this habit become an obsession.

Remember then that the trained nurse is the greatest factor in treatment. The physician sees his patient only at intervals, but the nurse is the patients constant companion.

Her work is big and very much worth while. Every nurse should be proud of her profession and keep to its highest ideals. The patient should feel the personal interest of the nurse in his welfare rather than to be conscious of the feeling that she is working for money.

A kindly spirit, a helpful frame of mind, a willingness to serve others, these together with a thorough understanding of her work and a readiness to impart her knowledge to all, makes the ideal nurse.

By teaching your patients the simple principles of living you can spread the gospel of good health, and when all is said and done, to be well is to be happy, and in condition to enjoy life to the full.

Following Dr. Chandler's address, the judge introduced Miss Ada Eldridge, director of the American Nurses' Association. Miss Eldridge spoke on the "Nursing Profession," which she placed second only to that of being a wife and mother. She said that it was wonderful to be a nurse, and that it was wonderful to be graduated this year. It was wonderful, she said, to be able to participate in the work during the war and in the services during the "flu" epidemic. The nursing profession, said she, is not so old. It is now the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, the founder of modern nursing. Today in Cambridge, Mass., there lives a woman, Linda Richards, the first nurse to be graduated from a training school. She is not yet 80 years of age. This year, said the speaker, is also a great year in the nursing profession, because nurses have been granted a relative rank in the army, and also because of recent laws passed in New York state which give protection to nurses and to the public as well. Miss Eldridge agreed with Dr. Chandler that a nurse is a teacher of health, but she must love the work, and if she teaches to be healthy, she must first be healthy herself. There would be no shortage of nurses if the members of the Alumnae would tell what it means to be a nurse. Nothing is higher, said she, than the ideals of love of humanity and a desire to serve. The motto of all nurses, said Miss Eldridge in closing, should be "I serve."

In presenting the diplomas to the class, Judge Betts presented the congratulations of the board of managers. He also took occasion to speak of the growth of the hospital and over the need of more. The new nurses' house will be a benefit to the training school in that room will be given in the hospital for the training which the nurses must now go to Bellevue for.

Aside from the diplomas, each graduate was presented with a class pin and a corsage bouquet.

Benediction was pronounced by the Very Rev. Dean J. J. Hickey.

A number of friends of the graduates were present, as were many members of the Alumnae in uniform.

Following the exercises, a reception was held, at which time refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed. The music was by Shurter's orchestra.

GOV'T VESSELS WORTH HALF COST

Gillen Makes Further Statements Denouncing Cost Plus System, Injustice To Builders of Wooden Vessels and Tanker Program.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 18.—Thirteen hundred government built ships today are worth less than one half of what the government spent to build them.

It cost the government $3,800,000,000 to produce these vessels, and their value today is $1,800,000,000 or "less."

This revelation was made today by Martin Gillen, former shipping board official, when he resumed his testimony before the congressional investigating committee here today.

Gillen, who yesterday shed a flood of testimony concerning waste, corruption and inefficiency, today gave fresh sensational details. He told of the "cost plus" system of shipbuilding contracts, involving immense "padding" of costs, and revealed glaring flaws in the oil tanker programme.

"Until liquidation on the shipping board's war effort is completed, a new balance sheet struck, and new principles established the government built merchant marine will be hopelessly handicapped," said the witness.

Builders of wooden ships got a "raw deal" from the government, Gillen asserted on the stand.

"The government," he said, "induced contractors to put their money into plants for building wooden ships and then called off the program without providing for amortization of these special plants, which were useless after such work was stopped.

"The wooden ship builders were left high and dry with their loss. Amortization was allowed all other special manufacturers, whose production depended solely upon war contracts.

"I am not for waste but when the government induces people to go in and do work for it for war purposes, it should absorb the losses consequent upon sudden termination of such work."

Gillen, who has already testified that corruption and inefficiency cost the country a clear $2,000,000,000 loss, repeated today his charges of a total lack of system in the various shipping board departments "everything was in chaos when Judge Payne became chairman," he said.

"A departmental scrap" between the war department and the shipping board, the witness said, resulted in great laxity in auditing and settling claims.

THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT YOUR CAR

Watch Your Generator and Storage Battery Carefully During Season Changes.

PROPER RATE FOR CHARGING

Great Care Must Be Exercised in Putting Right Amount of Current Through Battery to Restore Energy Contained in Cells.

Due to the change of seasons from the cold weather conditions to warmer it is well to see that the generator that may have been boosted to take care of the cranking conditions should be changed to take care of the cranking conditions brought about by warm weather. It is not necessary to have as much current flowing into a storage battery during the warmer weather as it is during the cold, because of the fact that the oil is not as heavy and the engine is not so hard to crank, says a writer in an exchange. The gasoline is easier vaporized and the ignition has more voltage, due to the fact that the battery can exert its full energy.

Change in Charging Rate.

The reason that we advise a change in charging rates at this season, of the year is because of the fact that a great many batteries that have been used abnormally at this season of the year and during the cold weather have been worked to their limit; in other words they have been almost entirely exhausted and to start recharging these batteries, even while on the car, at a high rate will cause a rapid deterioration of the plates and also is liable to cause a great deal of trouble from armatures becoming overheated and burning up, also the regulator or cutout on the machine becoming overheated and causing it to burn out. The charging rate considered which is proper for generators of certain types is between 10 and 15 amperes and it is not advisable to carry the charging rate higher than this because of the reflex action that this has on the generator and battery and regulating apparatus. It is always good to take into consideration that the lower charging rate is the better for a battery that has been worked hard than to start a rapid charging rate.

Bring Back Gradually.

There is a very similar condition existing between the charging of a storage battery and the case of a sick man. When the patient is on the road to recovery, the physician always advises that the food be carefully selected and the patient gradually be brought back to his full strength. The same applies to a storage battery. Great care must be taken with the proper amount of current put through the battery to restore the energy contained in the cells. It is also advisable at this time of the year before going into summer driving to have the voltage and gravity tests taken periodically so that the battery's recuperation will be brought back to a normal state without causing undue danger.

REMOVING CAPS FROM HUBS

Most Stubborn Cases Can Be Remedied by Use of Jack and Long-Handled Wrench.

Hub caps won't always come off merely by wrench persuasion, even when considerable manual effort is also used, says Motor Life. If the cap is so tight that you cannot budge it by your own efforts, bring the jack into the matter. Use a fairly long-handled wrench, and place the jack under the end of the handle. A few strokes of the jack will get the best of the stubbornest hub cap.

LITTLE AUTO NOTES FROM NEAR AND FAR

Iowa has more than 362,000 motor vehicles.

The history of the motortruck antedates the passenger automobile.

Between 6,000 and 7,000 motorcycles are in use in the Netherlands.

The British army employed 418 women motor drivers during the war.

There are only 299,135 miles of improved highway in this country.

More than 3,000,000 horses were displaced by motortrucks last year.

The largest motorcycle factory in the world is at Springfield, Mass.

Sales of automobiles in British Columbia totaled 6,000 cars last year

Rubber tires on motor trailers are required in Michigan and Wisconsin.

Motortruck trains moved between points 1,000 miles distant during the war.

As a part of its collection of freaks, the first motor vehicle to be exhibited around the country was among the big attractions in a circus in 1896

WHEEL WILL ABSORB SHOCKS

Outer Rim Provided With Channel Fitted With Thick, Specially Prepared Lubrico.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing an automobile wheel, the invention of A. W. Althoff of Tulsa, Okla., says:

This invention relates to wheels of the floating-hub type, an object being to provide a wheel which will absorb shock. The outer rim of the wheel is provided on its inner surface with a channel in which the edge of the inner or floating portion movably fits, the channel being fitted with thick, specially prepared lubrico to absorb shock. An extra compartment in the rim carries the over-compression of the movable substance supply and eccentric movements of the inner floating portion places the supply again in communication within the channel. Another feature is a tread composed of traction plates or blades with a concrete material interposed between them.

VALUE OF FEATHERED STOCK

More Poultry Kept on Farms in United States Than All Other Livestock Combined.

Unusual interest in systematic poultry improvement throughout the country is apparent from reports received by the United States department of agriculture in connection with the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign. Figures collected thus far indicate that more poultry is kept on farms in the United States than all other livestock combined, and that a greater proportion of the poultry is of pure blood than any other kind of livestock.

Of the Meat Furnished by the Farm to the Farmer and His Family Poultry Constitutes About 10 Per Cent.

The records also refute the frequent assertion that most livestock raisers take little interest in feathered stock, leaving it largely to the women.

A Connecticut farmer who recently enrolled in the "better sires' movement is an example of the interest of men in improved poultry. He listed 30 cattle and 1,939 poultry—all of pure breeding. No other breeding stock was kept on the farm.

SWIMMING HOLE FOR DUCKS

While Not Considered Essential for Growing Fowls, It Is Wise to Provide This Feature.

While water to swim in is no longer regarded as essential for duck growing, the fowls enjoy this feature so much that we have always considered it wise to provide a small swimming hole for them. However, in raising young ducks for market they will fatten sooner without swimming. However, they must have all the water they want to drink and it should be deep enough for them to immerse their heads in.

GET AFTER LICE VIGOROUSLY

Peculiar Fact That Vermin Will Infest Some Fowls in Flocks While Others Go Free.

If one of a promising flock seems to make slower progress in growth, has a dull looking plumage and pale face—look for lice. It is queer how lice will infest some birds in a flock while others seem practically free from it. Unless you get after them vigorously, they will certainly stunt the bird.

POULTRY NOTES

Select vigorous birds.

Grow your own poultry feed.

Supply an abundance of fresh water.

Don't allow growing chicks to crowd.

Goslings do not need feed until they are 24 to 36 hours old.

Dispose of the male birds not later than June 1. Market a better quality of eggs.

Young turkeys do not bring out of the shell as much natural pep as do young chickens, hence they must be fed earlier.

The heavier breeds, such as Rocks and Reds, and Orpingtons, will not take the perches as readily as Leghorns and Anconas.

In the rearing of chicks the essential thing is to keep them growing right along from the moment they are hatched to the period of maturity.

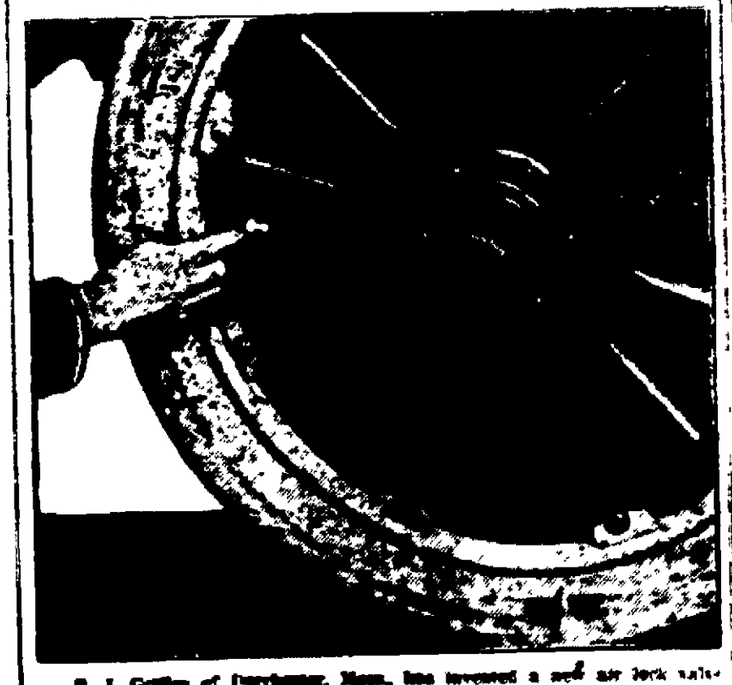
"AIR LOCK" VALVE WILL PROLONG LIFE OF TIRES, SAYS AN EASTERN INVENTOR



P. J. Griffen of Dorchester, Mass., has invented a so-called air lock valve which he claims will increase the life of pneumatic tires 30 per cent. The valve locks the air in the tube for all time or until a blowout or puncture releases it. It does away with rubber collars and plungers. This is now a prolific source of slow leaks in all plunger valves caused by rotting and drag on road and the theft of at least 25 per cent of tire-cut tires.

The photograph shows the new valve attached to an automobile tire.

CONSTANTINE TELLS HIS SIDE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Lucerne, Nov. 18.—Former King Constantine of Greece makes friendly overtures to the allies in an interview given today. He denied that he ever intended to throw Greece into the world war on the side of the Central Powers. Constantine expects a plebiscite in Greece upon his return to the throne before the beginning of the new year.

"I never had an opportunity to state my side of the case during the controversy over the position of Greece during the war," said the ex-king. "For more than three years I have been cut off from the world. All my letters from Athens were stopped. I never had the lightest intention of putting Greece in the conflict upon the side of Germany. Great prominence was given to a telegram I sent to the ex-Kaiser, but I sent several others when he was pressing me to go over to his side. I assured him that I would not break the neutrality of Greece. I have always had admiration and liking for the English people.

"It was a big satisfaction to me to see my people firmly condemn a regime that was not compatible with true democracy. They have recovered the liberties which they always treasured. I hope the solemn American verdict will open up a new era of justice, which is indispensable for curing the inevitable evils of the war.

"I am the constitutional sovereign of Greece but I do not wish to take advantage of the election. I want my people to give me a clear call if they want me to come back. The Chamber of Deputies will assembly at Athens in about three weeks and then I hope it will call for a plebiscite. I anticipate the result: I think it will be a request from my people for me to re-ascend the throne. Then I will return to Athens.

"My policy will be for a strong Greece. Nothing will be altered in that respect. But in addition my people will regain the liberty which Venizelos took away from them while he was dictator. More than seventy people were shot at his orders and innumerable others were imprisoned. He invented a new offense. People who were suspected of being badly disposed against his government were thrown into prison. All this will be changed. Curious as it may sound, I have become the champion of real democracy.

"I do not agree that Great Britain and France should be the guarantors of the Hellenic throne, but I trust that no opposition will be put in the way of my return if the Greek people express that desire. I hope that the Entente nations now understand how much dust was thrown into their eyes by Venizelos who was largely dominated by his personal ambitions."

EIGHMEY'S LITTLE COUNTY FAIR

Just Like the Ellenville Fair, Exhibitors Are Slow in Placing Their Goods, But It Promises to Be a Success.

Although exhibitors have been slow in placing their exhibits, just as they are at a regular county fair, the fruit and vegetable exhibit in the windows of S. E. Eighmey's store, corner of Broadway and Mill street, opened on time this morning with a very creditable showing and more exhibits that had been promised were expected to arrive during the day.

Mrs. Winchell of Ponckhockie has an exhibit of carrots and beets grown in her home garden.

John Herring of Ulster Park exhibits five varieties of apples that are a credit to his skill as a grower of fine fruit and have already resulted in one order for apples from a commercial traveler who, until he saw Mr. Eighmey's "little county fair" supposed all the fancy apples came from California and was astounded when told that fine fruit was grown in Ulster county.

The judges, E. L. Chase, manager of the Ulster County Farm Bureau, E. F. Hathaway of Port Ewen and William A. Warren of Hurley, will inspect the exhibits and award the prizes on Saturday. Mr. Eighmey's advertisement in The Freeman tells what these prizes are. At the conclusion of the exhibition, next Tuesday, the fruit and vegetables will be sent to the Industrial Home to help along the Thanksgiving dinner.

Exhibits will be received until Saturday, but should be sent in as soon as possible. Each exhibit is shown with the name of the exhibitor and a card stating the variety of fruit or vegetable.

SENSATIONAL CHARGE

Of Sinn Fein "Horribleness" by Hamar Greenwood.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Nov. 18.—Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, announced in the house of commons this afternoon that the British authorities in Ireland had seized a document, written by the commander in chief of the Irish republican army, which "contains remarkable and horrifying statements in connection with the spread of typhoid fever germs among the British troops and glanders among the army horses."

This document, according to Sir Hamar Greenwood, was addressed to the Sinn Fein chief of staff.

HIGH FALLS.

High Falls, Nov. 18.—The subject of the Rev. Mr. Dangremond's sermon last Sunday morning was "The Functions of the Christian Church." taken from the text, "Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." The first function, he said, is to establish and strengthen God's kingdom on earth by giving inspiration, according to our various needs; the second, by imparting instruction. One of the greatest functions of the church is to educate by teaching the truths that Christ taught, and the truth He taught by example, about service. Other functions of the church were mentioned, to be developed later.

The Bible Society will be brought to the attention of the people of the Reformed Church next Sunday morning by Mr. Taylor, who has a forceful message to bring.

VIENNA'S PLIGHT MOST DESPERATE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Nov. 18.—Dr. Marguels, one of the world's leading meteorologists, is dead in Vienna. He starved to death.

Extraordinary as it may seem there is nothing strange or new in this item. Death from starvation is a daily occurrence in Viena, once the gayest and brilliant capital in Europe.

It is "news" for the papers of that city. The columns which used to be filled with advertisements of pastries and dainties, which made Vienna the mecca of gourmands, are black with death notices these days and ninety out of every hundred deaths are due to under-nourishment or outright starvation.

"Austria Hungery" is what the shadow of the Hapsburg Empire is called in the newspapers. Vienna itself, where nearly one-third of Austria's population is concentrated, has come to be known as the "City of Death." Men, women and children, die like flies there, and always it is the same story, starvation.

Dr. Marguels, whose case is merely an illustration, was 65 years old. He had nothing to support him except a pension, which at the present exchange amounted to about three dollars a month. There are thousands like him in Vienna, men and women once wealthy and of eminent ranking in the world of science, art, literature, now living in attics or cellars, existing literally on crumbs, slowly wilting away, and actually longing for death because it means liberation from their sufferings.

And the children of Austria! Theirs is a ghastly story in itself.

"There are 24,000 families without a home in Vienna," cables Jacob Rheumann, the city's mayor, who, along with other prominent Austrian officials, responded to a request by the International News Service for a statement on the situation.

"These families are respectable people, whom we have to house in make-shift shanties, cellars and old rail cars."

With the ensuing winter, hunger's most formidable ally, in its war of extinction, has begun to make itself felt.

"Austria," says Mayor Rheumann, "cannot grow more than three months' supply of her cereal requirements and cannot raise more than ten per cent of the coal she wants."

In this plight, which the statesmen of Europe have begun to regard as the most appalling situation on the continent because of its inherited menace of pestilence and chaos, the leaders of the stricken republic see but one ray of hope; that of American help.

"At the beginning of 1919, America saved us from starvation," says a joint statement by Dr. Karl Renner, and Dr. Mayer, his successor.

"Only because America gave us a credit of forty-eight million dollars were we able to give our people at last some food. Again, in 1920, we would have been without bread, but for the 200,000 tons of flour America sent us."

"Last winter," says Mayor Rheumann's statement, which is nature of an appeal to the American mayors and the American people at large, "new born babies froze to death in the maternity hospitals. The misery will be far greater this winter because the power of resistance has materially decreased. Many people develop intestinal trouble and skin disease because the bread contains a mixture of from 30 to 50 per cent of Indian corn. This bread, which is actually poisonous, must be sold by the government far under cost price.

"American flour, so magnanimously given us by the American government, has kept us alive so far. But it has came to an end. We cannot buy abroad. Our neighbors will not supply us. What are we to do? Owing to lack of coal and raw materials we cannot work.

"We own the finest iron ore deposits in Europe, but the furnaces are closed down. Some people abroad say we should do what the Irish did in the nineteenth century—emigrate or die out.

"But supposing we did, in our despair, decide to emigrate, where would be allowed to go? Where could our country transport us?"

An American commission, according to the data supplied to the International News Service by Dr. Renner and Dr. Mayr, examined 477,000 Austrian children and found seventy-eight per cent undersized and fifty per cent in considerable danger of death.

Warm tribute is paid by the Austrian officials to the work of the unheralded heroes of American relief battling the stalking spectre of starvation and cold. American food packages are constantly pouring into Austria. One such packet, added to the official ration, helps an Austrian to subsist from two to ten months, according to Dr. Renner.

In the Hofburg, the ancient town residence of the Hapsburgs, 11,000 children are fed daily by American kitchens. In Schoenbrunne, former imperial summer residence, fourteen thousand are given food every day. This relief work, however, is financially assured only up to the end of next May. What will happen then? Austria shudders to think.

"America saved us twice; America can save us again and put us back on our feet," is the refrain of all appeals from Vienna.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

New York, Nov. 18.—There was a firm demand for many stocks at the opening of the stock market today, which was effective in causing advances in the majority of issues during the first fifteen minutes. Some shares opened at declines but losses in most cases were more than recovered in the next few transactions. Baldwin Locomotive was an instance of this condition, opening ⅞ lower at 96⅝ and then rising to 98. Bethlehem Steel B yielded ⅝ to 57⅞ but regained the loss. Steel Common was quiet, sagging ⅝ to 81½ and Lackawanna Steel lost 2⅛ to 50. Railroad stocks held well. Southern Pacific rose 1⅜ to 110⅝ and Reading rose ⅞ to 88. Baltimore and Ohio advanced ⅝ to 39½. The Petroleum stocks generally were higher. Mexican Petroleum gained 1⅜ to 161½ and Sinclair advanced ⅝ to 26. Inspiration Copper was weak, falling 1½ to 32½.

After being subjected to pronounced pressure during the first hour, the market turned strong in the late forenoon and vigorous upturns were made. Steel Common after being forced down to 81 had a sharp rally to 82¼. Bethlehem Steel B which sold down to a new low for the year at 56⅝ rallied to above 57. There was a wide range to the fluctuations in Mexican Petroleum. That stock after selling from 161½ to 158 advanced to 161.

Following the announcement of the omission of the dividend American International fell sharply from 47½ to 44⅝.

The market closed weak; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds weak.

Get Out of the Hole.

When you find you are a square peg in a round hole, get out of the hole. It is worse than an auto in a rut. It worries you, and when your daily work worries you it does not matter much how delightful your hours of play may be. Half the world, perhaps, starts at the wrong thing. Many people work out of it into something different. A farmer finds his real aptitude is for raising fine cattle, and at length he has become a stock breeder. Another is appalled by a few hundred acres and comes to raise garden vegetables on a few. An engineer turns to be a salesman or an executive, and so on. Not every task offers this chance to the worker gradually to leave it behind. If a fair trial, of doing one's best for a year or two or three, still finds one either listless or worried, or worse still becoming a machine, then he needs to remember that any man or woman who will work need not fear starving. He needs to get into something else to which he can give the best he has. Few of us leave records like the Washington monument. It matters more that we should do what we do well and do it with enjoyment.—Milwaukee Journal.

Effect of Drink at Sea.

Drs. R. J. Slater, O. Bergen, M. H. Beilchus and E. B. Hawk of Philadelphia have been testing the effect of water, tea, coffee and cocoa on the digestion of meals of mixed foods. They report to the American Journal of Physiology (Baltimore) that one liter of cold water, tea either hot or cold, or hot coffee drunk with a meal does not delay the passage of the food from the stomach, but the addition of sugar to the coffee does slightly delay the process. Cocoa materially delays it. Coffee, tea and water seem also to stimulate gastric secretion, but cocoa delays it, and coffee with sugar and cream has little effect.

WHY

Microbic Diseases Can't Be Eliminated

The island of St. Kilda, says Medical Press, affords an object lesson in eugenics. Owing to its inaccessibility, its inhabitants are for long periods together protected from all germs infectious. The few ships which visit its shores during a limited part of the year bring with them only germs of mild infections, such as the common cold, which generally spread throughout the island. More serious infections are rarely imported, and the inhabitants, thus being afforded little opportunity of acquiring natural immunity against them (by a process of automatic elimination of the most susceptible), when a serious epidemic is introduced it is likely to devastate the population.

Just now most of the inhabitants are down with influenza. In the seventeenth century smallpox was brought to the island by a stricken ship and every inhabitant died of the disease. For many years the island remained uninhabited until in 1725 its owners repopulated it with the ancestors of the present stock.

The lesson which the history of St. Kilda enforces is just this—that strive as we may, we can never succeed in protecting the human race completely against microbic disease. Do what we will, we cannot eliminate from our planet all pathogenic microbes or all microbes capable of evolving pathogenic properties. Though doubtless we act wisely in protecting ourselves to the utmost limit of our powers against their attack, by cleanliness, by isolation, by inoculation, and the like, the fact must never be lost sight of that by so doing we are interfering with the process of racial adaptation. To lower the mortality from infectious disease in a community, the lower does the resistance of that community to infection become.

The protective mechanisms against infection with which the warm-blooded animals are endowed are among the marvels of biology. They have evolved as the result of an incalculable sacrifice of life and their efficiency can only be maintained by a continuance of this wholesale sacrifice. Such are the ways of nature. The recent epidemic of influenza should persuade us what we are.

COW SYMBOL OF FORTUNE

Why So Many Words in the Language That Refer to Money, Have Come Into Use.

The first coin ever struck off by Rome had a figure of an ox on it, and the cow has been in most patriarchal epochs of society the symbol of fortune. "This family is mine and these are my cows," says the Arab sheik, a dweller in tents, and this has been the cause of the use of the root of languages which stands for cow being used in many terms that mean money.

For instance, the Latin root pecu forms many such words. Pecuniary reward first meant a payment in cows; peculiarity originally referred to the number of cows a man had. The old Teutonic root for the word cow furnished the words "scot" and "scot-free"; a man who paid his bill or "scot" did so in a certain percentage of the value of a cow, and if he got into trouble but escaped without being mulcted in money he was said to have managed it without losing one of his cows.

Why Nature's Laws Are Necessary.

Habits of life have much to do with our seeing things. Some folks excuse questionable conduct because they have always been used to it. They have grown up in the midst of questionable things and look upon them as the natural way of life. When their conduct is questioned they look upon you in amazement and regard you as a freak. To them you are as much a mossback as they are renegades to you. Yet that does not excuse wrong conduct. There are certain things about life that conform to standards of nature. These must be made to respond to nature's laws, or the being suffers the consequence. There are certain mental and moral laws to which all humans are subject. By habit we may think it the proper thing to break them. But that does not make our conduct just. It's only when we conform naturally to the laws of God that we meet the end for which we were born.—Grit.

How Land Is Being Reclaimed.

The work of the reclamation service to date shows that 2,200,000 acres divided into about 67,000 farms of from 20 to 160 acres each have been or are being reclaimed. During the year water was available from government ditches for 1,883,278 acres on 41,636 farms and the government was under contract to supply water to approximately 1,600,000 acres. The available reservoir capacity at this time was approximately 9,652,000 acre-feet.

How Trees Might Be Saved.

If everyone would save the waste paper in his home it would not be necessary to use a single tree for such material. It would require more than 200,000,000 feet of lumber each year to make the paper shipping cases used throughout the country.

Why It Was Safer.

Said the weather prophet, "I think it is safest always to predict bad weather."

"Why's that?"

"Well, people are ready to forgive you if you turn out to be wrong."—Toledo Statesman.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

HOMER'S ILIAD

Condensation by
Prof. William Fewsmith Harris

It is the charm of the stories of the Iliad and the Odyssey that has allured readers in all ages. As the Iliad is the first great romance of high adventure, of deeds of perfect chivalry and wild fighting, of brave men and noble women, so the Odyssey is the first great novel of adventure in strange parts, of misfortunes thwarted and brought to justice by the hero who in the end comes to his own and rewards the true wife who bides at home and wields the triumphant return of him who shall free her from the trials that beset her.

The Greeks started the modern world going. As with Icarus they thought of the flying-man, with Agamemnon of wireless telegraphy in the message he sent leaping across the sea from Troy to Argos in the flames upon the hill-tops, and with Odysseus of the motion-picture in the vision of all past men and women who flitted before his eyes on his trip to the lower world, so, too, they introduced us to practically every form of human expression. The prose-romance came late in their development. The novel and the short story as they knew them for centuries were embodied in the Iliad and Odyssey.

Whether one poet wrote the Iliad and the Odyssey has been a question that has healed many thousands of minds. The perfect form in which they have come down to us proves clearly that many centuries contributed to the perfecting of the literary style in which they are written. The discussions over the "Homeric Problem" have laid the basis for literary and Biblical criticism in modern scholarship.

THE elders of the Trojans from their seats upon the Scaean gate looked down upon the hosts of Greeks and Trojans marshaled in the plain. For nine long years the armies had contended. Why had Agamemnon brought the men of many cities to fight around the walls of Priam's Troy? What was it all about?

Homer sings of the wrath of Achilles, but the beginning of all the trouble goes back of that, to the tale of a princely shepherd on a night surprised as he watched his flocks upon Mount Ida. The goddesses Hera, Athene and Aphrodite make him choose one of the world-old wishes; the judgment of Paris is for a fair face and love. To fulfill her promise Aphrodite leads him to King Menelaus' court in Sparta. Back to Troy Paris brings Queen Helen and great treasure. A hue and cry follow throughout Greece; Menelaus calls to his help the great overlord, his brother Agamemnon, Achilles the sacker of cities, wily Odysseus, venerable and genial Nestor, and all the chivalry of the land with men-and-ships to make war on Troy.

Others must pay for the wrongdoing of Paris—old King Priam of the Ashen Spear, his venerable queen, Hecuba, Hector and his noble wife Andromache, his little son Astyanax, Cassandra and all the rest whom the toll of war involves. Other stories of the many Greek epics, now lost, bring the tale of warring years up to the tenth, where the Iliad begins. Hector is the leader of the Trojans; Achilles has been the great fighting force of the Greeks, though now he has withdrawn in anger to his tent because of a slight put upon his honor by King Agamemnon.

The hostile forces are advancing to the battle; a dramatic moment brings Menelaus and Paris in sight of one another. The wrath of Hector blazes out against Paris for all the evil and shame his theft of women and wealth have brought. The gay and debonair Paris, however, can show splendid moments. "Hector, thy taunt is just. But throw not at me the lovely gifts of golden Aphrodite. The glorious gifts that the gods give are not to be flung away; no man could take them by mere willingness. But if thou doest wish me to battle and fight, make all the rest of the Trojans and Achaians sit down, and put me in the midst with warlike Menelaus to fight for Helen and all her goods, to see who shall conquer and prove the better man; let the rest conclude a friendship of trusty oaths; may ye dwell in fertile Troyland, and the others go back to Argos, nurse of steeds, and Achaia of fair women."

So it was that the hosts sat in high expectation in the plain, and Priam and the Trojan elders were gathered on the Scaean gate. And Priam, who bore no grudge against Helen for all the misery her fair face had brought to him and Troy—for he saw the hands of the gods in it all—called her to his side to tell him of the chiefs below whom she had once loved. Then those elders, who had long since worn their dashing days, paid the finest compliment a woman's beauty has ever received—how many thousand years ago!—as they saw Helen advancing. "No cause for anger that Trojans and well-greaved Achaians for such a woman long time should suffer sorrow." But another word! But there sit men upon the wall here, for you and me a glimpse of the World's Desire. "But even so," they continued, "let her go home upon the ships and may not sit as a sorrow to us and to our children after us."

The high hopes of settling all the [illegible] by the duel of the champions were in vain. The contest was indecisive and the truce was broken.

The scene changes to Troy itself. In an interval of the battle great Hector of the Glancing Helm had gone to the citadel. And there he said farewell to Andromache, his wife, and to his little boy, a picture that has never been surpassed for true tenderness—although it was so many hundred years ago. He smiled and looked upon the little boy in silence. "Ah, Hector," she cried, "stay here upon the wall! Thou art to me father and mother and brother, too, as well as lord. The foe will attack thee alone!" "I know the day shall come," he answered, "when holy Ilios shall perish, and Priam and the folk of Priam of the goodly Ashen Spear. But thought of him, of my mother, of my brothers, does not trouble me so much as that some warrior of the Achaians shall rob thee of the day of freedom." He stretched out his hand to the little boy, who shrank back to his nurse's breast in fear of the bronze and the horse-hair crest that nodded dreadfully from the top of the helm. Straightway Hector took off the helm and placed it on the ground. And when he had kissed his son and tossed him in his arms, he spoke in prayer to Zeus and the rest of the gods: "Grant, ye gods, that this son of mine prove foremost among the Trojans, a good and mighty king. And as he comes back from battle may many a man say of him, 'A far better man than his father,' and may his mother rejoice in heart." And then he handed him back to his mother, who received him smiling through her tears, and so departed to the battle with words of high cheer.

There follow many scenes of varied action—the Iliad is one of the great collections of short stories in the world's literature, in which is given a perfect picture of the life of that lordly society of so long ago. The plain people play little part, although their champion, Thersites, is the first democrat mentioned in literature. Mighty deeds of derring-do, high adventure, love of lords and ladies, the pranks of merry children—all are preserved, as it were, in amber, and the sentiment for the most part is so modern that it is almost impossible to believe that we are reading of people who lived many hundreds of years before Christ was born.

But over all impends one dreadful fate. It is a Greek tale—yet Hector, prince and leader of the foe, is the hero of the story. Of course he is not quite so strong, not quite so great a fighter as Achilles, the Greek champion, and all know that in the end Achilles will win. The great scenes are worked up to with consummate artistry. Achilles is still sulking in his tent; Hector is pressing the Greeks hard; Patroclus, Achilles' dearest friend, begs his chief to let him don his lord's armor and save his people; he has his way and Hector slays him. Achilles' anger blazes forth in all its passion. What now a petty slight? The great scene of the battle between the two inspires the poet to all his noblest power. They fight; Achilles pursues Hector thrice around the walls of Troy; Zeus weighs in golden scales the fates of the two; Hector is doomed to die; inexorable destiny may not be stayed. Achilles slays Hector, and every heart but that of the victor is wrung with the pity of it all. And in the end, even Achilles' heart is moved. For old King Priam can neither sleep nor eat while his son's body lies dead in the camp of the foe. Against the will of all that was dearest to him he gathered great store of ransom and made his way by night under the kindly guidance of the gods to Achilles' tent and sought for the body of his dear son. It is a scene of love and pity, of chivalry and greatness of heart that all the years since then have never seen surpassed. "Be not angry with me, Patroclus," prayed Achilles, "if thou shalt learn in Hades' house that I have given back noble Hector to his dear father." And Patroclus, one may be sure, shared the pity of all brave men and all true women ever since.

Monarch Endured Long.

The most curious contract ever entered into by an operatic star was surely that of Farinelli, who, about the year 1734, was deriving an income of £5,000 per annum. The singer afterwards visited Spain, where the king, Philip V, was suffering from mental depression, from which nothing seemed to arouse him until the advent of Farinelli. The queen was so delighted to see her royal spouse once more interested in anything, that she engaged Farinelli at a salary of £5,000 to remain in Madrid. This he did, singing the same four songs to the king every night for ten years. Eventually Philip succumbed, but he must have been a patient monarch.

Greatest Inspiration.

Nothing can be so inspiring to a human being as the idea that he is, of value, that his help is really wanted. Neither can so enforce the doctrine of responsibility as the realization that it rests with us to choose whether we shall excel or not, shall honestly or dishonestly, some portion of the work—Oliver Lodge.

MANILA: KANSAS CITY OF THE PHILIPPINES

In connection with the continued discussion of independence for the Philippines the capital city of the islands, Manila becomes of special interest.

As a transport wends inward from the China sea, it passes the island of Corregidor, beyond which stretches Manila bay, whose 120-mile circumference could surround the navies of the world. Its rival will not be found in the far East. On the right of its entrance stands Cavite, where Dewey sank the Spanish fleet.

From the bay the city of Manila seems to lie almost at water level with hazy mountains for a background. Before the United States came to the islands Manila was a sleepy town, sprawled lazily beyond the bay and the wharves of the river Pasig, which bisects it. Its streets were quiet and almost deserted at times, its suburbs shady and pretty, and a general air of "manana" pervaded its atmosphere.

Today its estimated population equals that of Jersey City, Indianapolis or Kansas City; the river is alive with launches and vessels of every description, including the houseboats of a literally floating population of fifteen thousand; and through its port it sends yearly to other countries nearly a hundred million dollars' worth of hemp, sugar, copra, tobacco and other comodities.

A unique sight in Manila is the Pace cemetery, which at present has fallen into disuse. It is composed of two concentric walls about six feet thick, honeycombed with holes just large enough for a coffin. In the olden days these were leased for periods of five years. At the end of that time if no one was sufficiently interested in the remains of an inmate to pay his rent for another five years his bones were thrown on a heap at the back of the cemetery. Imagine the "shimmy" the flesh on an ancestor-worshiping Chinaman's backbone would perform should he behold the queue of one of his progenitors protruding from this Golgotha.

Out from the walled city near the bay shore is Luneta, a small amusement park, and Wallace field, used for sports and the annual carnival. In the days of Spanish rule Wallace field was an execution ground for political prisoners, and here Dr Jose Rizal, the Filipino surgeon, novelist and patriot, was executed.

Manila's chief shopping district is north of the river, and enterprising Filipinos, Americans and Chinese have set up stores, banks, factories and restaurants, giving this portion of the city an up-and-doing air.

WHAT'S IN THE NAME "AMERICA"

Millions sing "America"; comparatively few know the origin of the name. Its history and its symbolism are described in a communication to the National Geographic society by John H. Finley as follows:

"'America'—a name that was first heard on the planet, or at any rate first put on a printed page, according to the best authorities, in the village of St. Die, among the Vosges mountains in the east of France, often called the baptismal font of America.

"On a pilgrimage to this valley of the Vosges some years ago, I found still standing the cloisters where the scholars had lived who wrote 'The Introduction to Ptolemy's Cosmography'—the book in which it was suggested that the name 'America' be given to the newly-discovered fourth continent—and who prepared the now famous map on which the emerging continent was identified. There, too, I found the site of the old printing shop, and the house itself in which the printer, Jean Basin, had lived.

"At the beginning of the war the Germans had occupied it, and in 1917 their guns looked down upon it from the 'blue line of the Vosges.' The cloisters, close under the mountains, I found in a recent and second pilgrimage had not been damaged, but there were many houses that had been destroyed by shell or by wanton fire, though Jean Basin's was still standing.

"Europe could not readily forget the geography of its infancy and childhood, but America began from its God-fearing settlement with an astronomy of infinite distances, with a geography partaking of the sky as well as of the sea and land.

"As there was no feudal system of society for America to outlive, inherit or fit did with the 'compact' and 'constitutional,' so there was no physical theory of the universe for it to abandon. It was democratic and Copernican from its first national consciousness.

"With this Copernican consciousness of the universe, America should be the least provincial of the continents, for Asia and Africa, as well as Europe, still remember the old cosmography and in some darker regions still cling to it."

BARBADOS: ISLAND OF VAST RESOURCES

Barbados is one of the least interesting and least known of the possessions of Great Britain.

Pear-shaped, solitary, farthest east of the West Indies, Barbados generally is accounted the most healthful of the group, even though it is the most populous country in the world, per square mile, except China, and George Washington carried to his grave the marks of smallpox contracted on a visit there.

The island—there is but one despite the misleading plural name—is but an eighth the size of our Rhode Island, but has twice as many inhabitants per square mile as our smallest and most densely populated state.

Seldom does a volcano become an asset, but volcanic eruptions have contributed largely to the fertility of Barbados. When the sun was obscured throughout one day in May, 1912, the Barbadans were panic stricken, but when the gentle rain of black dust subsided, the deposit was found to be ashes from an eruption of St. Vincent Soufriere, nearly 100 miles to the west, which enriched the soil.

Long before that time, though, Barbados was productive. Oldest of British colonial possessions except Newfoundland, it also was the first place in the British empire where sugar cane was planted. Its average crop of this now high-priced commodity is 50,000 tons. It also has 2,000 acres planted in sea-island or long-staple cotton; raises 40,000 bunches yearly of the Chinese banana, and exports molasses.

One phenomenon of Barbados has not been accounted for. For years the so-called "Barbados Coffin Story" furnished a mystery which would interest present day psychic investigators. In the yard of a church near Oistin's Town is a churchyard burial vault, hewn from rock and arched with cemented stone. A woman was buried there in a lead coffin, according to Barbadan custom. Several years later when the vault was opened again to receive another body, the coffin had been removed from its original position. Upon the second occasion special precautions were taken to seal the vault. Several times thereafter, though seals were unbroken and there seemed no other mode of entering the solid rock and masonry, the coffins were displaced. Finally the mouth of the vault was cemented, and when it was time to receive another body officials of the island and an immense crowd gathered for the ceremony. Once more all the leaden caskets were found to have been disturbed and the family had their dead removed to another burying ground. No satisfactory solution of these strange occurrences has been offered.

A natural curiosity of Barbados is the "Animal Flower Cave," the so-called flowers being sea worms. Not so agreeable are the Mauchineel, or poison trees, along the shores, whose leaves blister the skin and contaminate the water.

WHAT IS THE UKRAINE?

In the heart of the Ukrainian territory, Poles and Ukrainians participated in a struggle with the Bolsheviki.

"What is the Ukraine? The Poles and the Lithuanians of a few centuries ago knew well this most turbulent section over which they attempted to rule, and Imperial Russia for a long time was greatly troubled by this very unruly part of her expansive domain. The Tatars and the Turks felt its proximity because of the many raids made upon them by the wild warriors of the steppes," says Nevin O. Winter in a communication to the National Geographic society.

"The Ukraine includes southeastern Russia, with the exception of the province known as Bessarabia, which partakes of the character of the Balkan states and is peopled with Roumanians and Bulgarians. The great seaport of Odessa and surrounding country have been added to it under the new alignment.

"The Ukraine does not reach much north of Kiev or east of Kharkov, but it is a large state in itself, about as large as the former German empire, with some twenty-five or thirty millions of people living in it.

"There is a love about the landless peasants of the steppes in the Ukraine. In wide, level spaces, or in gentle undulations, they reach out until sky and horizon meet in a barely perceptible line. Parts of it remind one very much of our own western prairies. In spring and summer it is an ocean of verdure, with the varied shades of green of the growing vegetation interspersed with flowers of many hues; later, in the autumn after the crops are harvested, it becomes a brown waste of stubble and burned-up pastures; in winter it is a white, glistening expanse of snow.

"There are not many old towns in the Ukraine. Except in Kiev and Kharkov, one will hardly find a building more than a hundred years old. No old medieval churches built up by the toil of generations of devout hands, no old chateaux of the nobility, no palaces rich in pictures will be encountered. The great majority of the towns are still big, overgrown villages.

"The towns are separated from each other by enormous distances, with imperfect communication. The peasants plant their villages in the lee of some swell in the surface or by the edge of a stream in which they can water their flocks during the drought which may come."

SOME BIG GAME OF THREE MILLION YEARS AGO

Speaking of the brontosaurus, if any one ever did, one might paraphrase Gelett Burgess:

"I never saw a dinosaur,
I never hope to see one."

Yet, according to reports from African explorers a live dinosaur, a brontosaurus has been found in Africa.

Now that the dinosaur is with us, potentially, big game enthusiasts will be interested in this description of prehistoric big game, quoted from a communication to the National Geographic society by Barnum Brown:

"Today we must go to Africa for the biggest game; but there was a time in the dim distant past when America produced animals larger than any now living. That was so long ago that nothing remains of these creatures except their bones, and they are turned to stone.

"The animals are dinosaurs; for the moment we will call them lizards—not the creeping, crawling kind, but huge reptiles that stalked upright through the jungles, rivaling in size the elephant, the hippopotamus and the rhinoceros.

"The place is Alberta, Canada, and the time of their existence 3,000,000 years ago.

"In these marshes of prehistoric times dwelt a host of reptiles, some large, some small and of various forms, flesh eaters and herb eaters, but all sharing certain characters in common and known as dinosaurs. Not any were closely related to any living reptile, yet they had some characters common to the lizards, crocodiles and birds.

"Of the kinds characteristic of the period one species, a herb eater named Trachodon, was more than 30 feet long and about 15 feet high when standing erect. Its head, with broadly-expanded mouth, resembles that of a duck, but back of the beak there are more than 2,000 small teeth, disposed in many vertical rows each containing several individual teeth, the new ones coming up from below as the old ones were worn.

"The long hind legs terminated in three large hoofed toes, and the shorter, slender front feet were partly webbed. A long, thin, slender tail served as a powerful swimming organ, and the body was covered with rough integumentary skin. Having no means of defense, it lived chiefly in the water, where it was free from attacks of the flesh eaters."

SEA SLEDS FOR AIRPLANES

Speed of Gliding Boats Makes the Taking Off From Small Space a Matter of Item.

Great sea sleds capable of carrying airplanes out in midocean are being developed by a Boston concern. These are equipped with four motors, totaling 1,750 horsepower, and have a speed of 58 miles an hour.

In the event of war with a foreign nation these sea sleds would be utilized to transport heavy bombing planes across the ocean. Thousands could be sent at a comparatively low cost.

While it is possible for an airplane to leave the deck of a sea sled, there is not sufficient room for a landing to be made. The flying machine would have to work out its own salvation once its wheels left the sled.

These sea sleds are built to lift and run on the surface of the water. When a speed of 50 miles an hour is reached it is possible for an airplane to open its motors and leave the deck without any further runway.

Experiments made off the New England coast show that a small airplane can "take off" when the sea sled is making but 40 miles an hour in a heavy sea. Other tests are being made to develop the high power planing sea sleds into pleasure craft as well as for military and naval purposes.

Gordon S. Ormie of New Orleans, a wealthy sportsman has had a 32-footer built for his use in the Gulf of Mexico. Factories have been established in Atlantic City to aid in producing the sea sleds, which are now being tested off the New England coast.

Passing True.

"The leading lady of the play made her mark in the first scene."

"Yes, I saw her do it when she leaned her powdered face on the hero's black dress coat shoulder."

Terrapin on H. C. L. List.

Years ago wild terrapin inhabited the salt and brackish marshes along the Atlantic seaboard in large numbers and were highly relished and prized by epicures. These palatable turtles have so grown in popularity that they now have come to be regarded as one of the greatest delicacies known to connoisseurs and the demand for them has led to such persistent overfishing that a marked diminution in the available supply has resulted. The result is that Chesapeake terrapin which measure six inches in length on the lower shell now sell for $50 to $60 a dozen on the city market while larger terrapin are correspondingly more valuable. Louisiana and Texas terrapin are almost as highly prized as are the Chesapeake variety, while the Carolina and Florida species are not in demand for table use.—George H. Dacy, in the Scientific American.

Dignity of Peruvian Mayor.

The mayor of the smallest town in Peru feels that it is incumbent on him in order to make the proper display of official dignity, to be accompanied by a band of pipers whenever he appears on any state occasion. These musicians have instruments which consist of a series of reeds strung together and make weird music.

Has 650 Species of Birds.

Costa Rica is about the same size as West Virginia, but over 650 species of land birds have been found in that little Central American republic, whereas, in all America north of Mexico only some 500 species are known. And in the Andean region, within an even smaller area, a larger number of birds has been recorded than from Costa Rica. In Andean Colombia, for example, expeditions of the American Museum of Natural History actually secured specimens of over 1,150 species of land birds, or more than twice as many as exist in the United States, Canada and Greenland in tropical South America birds are practically nonmigratory. They are, therefore, continuously subjected to the influences of their surroundings and do not mix with birds from other localities—two factors of the utmost importance in the evolution of species.

Suspension Bridge.

The Scientific American says that the suspension bridge over the Snake river near Twin Falls in southern Idaho, is the highest in America, if not in the world. The actual measurement is 345 feet from the floor of the bridge to the stream, and the length of the span is 488 feet. Aside from its extreme height, the bridge is of interest because, although materials had to be hauled a great distance, the structure was completed in four months.

"Y" BOWLERS IN 27TH POSITION

Returns have been received from the official scorer of the New York State Y. M. C. A. bowling tournament and they show that of the 34 associations taking part in the tournament, Kingston is in the 27th position. From scores reported somebody must have gone crazy as one man had an average of 220 for three games, which is bowling some. The local men expect however in the next match next Wednesday night to stage a come back and improve their position in the league by eight or ten places.

The averages and high score for the bowlers of the Mercantile League are given below. Ballard of the West Shore continues to keep the lead although closely followed by Raible and Matthews.

NEW BASKETBALL LEAGUE FORMING

Tonight at the Y. M. C. A. will be the organization of the proposed Industrial Basket Ball League under the direction of the physical committee of the local association. A number of factories have signified their intention of entering teams in the league and some fast ball can be expected by the industrial men. A number of the teams have already been uniformed and have been practicing for some weeks. The U. S. Lace Mills have erected an outdoor court and with the practice out doors their wind is sure to be in first-class condition. The Fessenden Company have had several practice games and while not using their best men in these games have shown a brand of ball that will be hard to equal. No reports have been heard from the Herbert Company or the West Shore railroad teams but from the material available and the reputations of these teams in the past teams of par can be expected from them. Any industrial concern or factory in Kingston desiring to enter a team should have a representative at the meeting at the Y tonight. The men on the team do not necessarily need to be members of the Y. M. C. A. and this point should be an aid to a number of factories in putting teams in the league. The meet at the "Y" for tonight is called for 7:30.

AT THE THEATERS.

Vaudeville, Wally Reid and Dorothy Gish Tonight.

Theatergoers who are keen for variety will have excellent opportunity at the Opera House tonight, Friday and Saturday. The vaudeville offering is heralded as a snappy show from start to finish with a photoplay star that is one of the most popular actors in Kingston, Wallace Reid in "Excuse My Dust," a sizzling automobile love story. The Revue Comique comes to the opera house on a split engagement with Syracuse and as a comedy, song and dance number. "Excuse My Dust" is the sequel to "The Roaring Road" and "double speed," pre-eired here this fall. There are three performances daily at 2:20, 7 and 9.

Vivacious Dorothy Gish and her novel means of laugh-getting will be seen at Keeney's tonight in the sprightly screen comedy, "Remodeling her Husband." Booth Tarkington's adventures and emotions of Edgar Pomeroy entitled "Edgar Takes the Cake" is also featured. Tomorrow and Saturday Thamos Meighan in "The Prince Chap," a story of a love among artists.

"Piccadilly Jim" will be presented at the Auditorium tonight, starring Owen Moore. This picture made such a hit at Keeney's last night that it was held over to be presented for the benefit of the Auditorium patrons. It is a comedy from the Saturday Evening Post story. Charlie Chaplin is also billed in "The Vagabond," making an all comedy program. Tomorrow a thrilling detective mystery drama will be the attraction, the "Hex" series, "The Unseen Witness."

When the critics of every New York daily pronounce "Riddigore" the one big hit in recent years, little remains to be said in praise of that musical comic opera which will be presented at the Kingston Opera House next Wednesday night.

Taking No Chances.

The board of supervisors and county canvassers of White Plains are taking no chances. Some of the members have appeared at meetings wearing soft collars. The following resolution is the result: "Resolved, that it be the rule for members of this board to wear stiff collars, especially our presiding officer, least it gradually lapse into the times of Alexander the Great, or the fig leaf of the time of the Garden of Eden."

SARATOGIANS CLEAN PLAYERS

The Saratoga Springs High School football outfit will probably get into Kingston Friday evening for the game with Kingston High School on Saturday afternoon. They may get here in time to have a brief work out on the Athletic Field before the game, so as to get somewhat acquainted with the lay of the land.

The Saratoga Spings team is highly recommended as a fast, clean-playing outfit. The northern New York newspapers have spoken well of their ability and clean sportsmanship.

It is hoped that the city will open its doors to these boys when they come down here. They will be a long way from home and any courtesy that can be shown them will make a lasting impression.

Glens Falls showed the Kingston High School boys a good time when they were up there, so K. H. S. hopes to return the courtesy via Saratoga Springs.

The local boys hope to make the guarantee by the sale of tickets outside the school. Without a doubt, there will be a record-breaking crowd at the game on Saturday.

LEAGUE HIRES EXPERT MILK MAN

Former President of Borden's Farm Products is Latest Addition to Cooperative Association's Staff Of Specialists.

The Dairymen's League has recently hired C. A. Weiant, who was formerly the president of the Borden's Farm Products Company, and who is one of the most expert milk men in the United States. Mr. Weiant will assist the organization in establishing markets for and selling Dairymen's League milk and manufactured products, and his expert help and advice will be a very large factor in assuring success for the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association. Securing the services of trained experts, such as Mr. Weiant, is an effective answer to the propaganda put out by the enemies of organized farmers that farmers cannot successfully run their own business.

The success of the Dairymen's League organization the last four years has been due to no small extent to the quality of leadership of the farmer officers and directors, who were chosen by the membership of the organization, and to the expert workers whom these directors have hired to do the technical work. Every employe that the league acquires must have, first, sympathy with and the viewpoint of farmers, and, second, expert training and experience which will enable him to do his particular work in the organization.

The man in charge of the organization work of the league, T. E. Milliman, was formerly one of the most successful farm bureau men in the state, in charge of farm bureau work in Orange county. During the milk strike of 1916, and again in 1919, the success that the dairymen attained was due to no small extent to farm bureau men like Mr. Milliman, who did not hesitate to work almost night and day to encourage the dairymen to stand together. So successful was Mr. Milliman's work that he was promoted from the work in Orange to assistant county agent leader of New York state with headquarters at the College of Agriculture at Ithaca. Because of his farm training, farmer's viewpoint and his great knowledge of organization affairs, he was chosen by the officers of the Dairymen's League to head one of the most important departments in the organization.

Another instance of the ability of farmers' organizations to get the best kind of help, is the securing by the league of the services of F. A. Hoar. Mr. Hoar was for thirty years one of the most successful newspaper men in New York city. It has been his business since coming with the league to see that the public, especially in the great cities, had the correct information about farmers and what they were trying to do in an organized way. Largely because of Mr. Hoar's valuable work, the people of New York city have an entirely different viewpoint of farmers and of dairymen from what they had a year ago.

W. W. Hovey, employed as manager of the Cooperative Association, is noted throughout eastern United States as the man who successfully built a large milk corporation. His experience in the milk business and proved executive ability insure proper business management of the farmers' business.

It would seem perfectly obvious that it is just as possible for farmers to hire experts like Mr. Weiant, and Mr. Hovey, who work directly for farmers and are responsible to them as it is for milk dealers to hire such experts, who work, not for the farmers, or the consumers, but for the interests which are between the two parties, most concerned.

Contata Tonight.

Walter Kid will give a short organ recital preceding the harvest cantata at the Albany Avenue Baptist Church this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The assisting soloists will be Mrs. Morris, contralto; The Misses Soger and Babcock, soprano; Mr. Hall, bass; Mrs. Cubberly, violinist. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Aremath Hayes.

Terrill in Army.

Thomas Webster Terrill of Esopus has been transferred from the 22nd Infantry, U. S. Army, to the 62nd Infantry. Mr. Terrill's ancestors were among the first settlers of the county.

Trap Lanterns for Bugs.

Entomologists have been experimenting in many parts of the United States with trap lanterns, to determine what classes of insects are most abundantly caught by these lures. At one station where the trap was run every night for five months, it was found that the beautiful insects, such as the buffalo tree hopper, the squash bug, the chinch bug, and the lacewing, almost entirely avoided the light, and comparatively few specimens were caught, whereas predaceous flies, lacewings, ladybugs and other insect aids of the farmer were developed in vast numbers.

Christmas Circus

Cheap paper offers any number of good opportunities for making Christmas gifts, especially for the children. Framed figures of wild, or of domestic animals, cut out, to make menagerie, or figures surround friends, that delight the youngsters. The pictures are pasted over stiff cardboard and then cut out, following the outline of the animal, but leaving a straight piece to provide a support.

California Rice.

In eight years the Sacramento valley of California has so developed rice growing that, according to the department of agriculture, the crop of the past season is estimated to be worth approximately $21,000,000. The value of the 1919 rice crop in California will probably be several millions greater than that of wheat and peaches, both of which are commonly considered to be relatively large crops in that state.

Mushrooms That Over Love.

Two hundred pounds of fodgehog mushroom spawn was recently planted in the Santa Barbara national forest of California, by an organization of southern California sportsmen, for the purpose of providing a much sought food for the horde of wild game inhabiting that region, says Popular Mechanics. A study of the habits of the fowl in a Los Angeles park revealed that they are so fond of fodgehog mushrooms as pets are of candy.

Seen under a powerful magnifying glass an unstropped razor blade looks like a saw edge

Stropping keeps the tiny teeth of the blade in perfect alignment—provides a smooth, keen edge for every shave

A safety razor and stropping device combined in one

YOUR own particular shaving difficulty—doesn't it really revert to a dulling razor blade?

That annoying pull when the razor fails to cut cleanly—the painful scraping that often results when you bear down too hard—the bother and expense of putting in a new blade every so often—all these troubles can be traced directly to a razor blade that has lost its first keen edge.

No shaving edge can keep its original keenness for more than a few shaves—not without stropping.

Stropping—that's the real secret of shaving comfort!

Look at a razor edge under a microscope and you will see hundreds of tiny saw teeth. More than 1500 of these teeth have been counted on an ordinary safety razor blade. Shaving bends these saw teeth out of line, makes them irregular. These irregular teeth catch in the beard, pull the tiny hair follicles and scrape the skin. That's what usually makes shaving so unpleasant, so annoying.

You don't need to put up with the discomfort of fast dulling blades—nor with the bother and expense of putting in a blade every so often. You can insure a fresh, keen edge for every shave if you use the AutoStrop Razor.

A new, sharp, shaving edge every day

Built right into the frame of the AutoStrop Razor is a remarkable self-stropping device—simple and efficient—which renews the fine, keen edge of the AutoStrop blade day after day.

You don't have to take the razor apart nor even remove the blade. Just slip the strop through the razor head, and move the razor back and forth along the strop. In 10 seconds you have a new, sharp, shaving edge. 500 cool, comfortable shaves are guaranteed from every dozen AutoStrop blades.

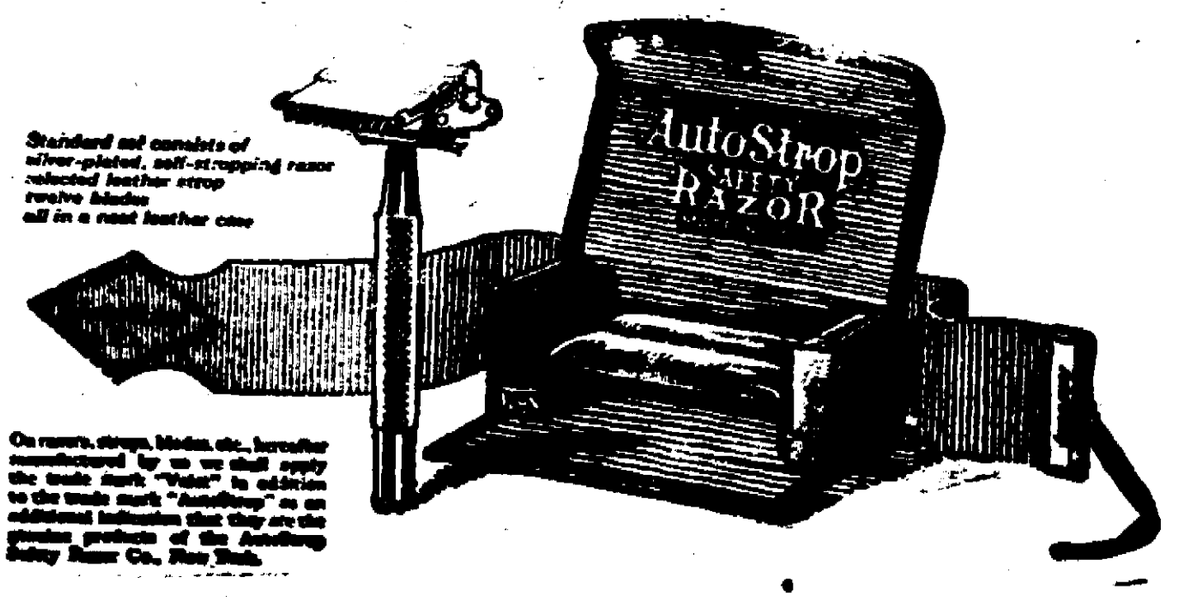
Don't put up any longer with the pull and scrape of unstropped blades. Begin tomorrow to get the comfort of a "new," sharp, shaving edge every morning. Ask your dealer about the AutoStrop Razor trial plan.

Like the leaf of a book

The AutoStrop Razor blade opens for cleaning like the leaf of a book. To clean, simply rinse and dry. No parts to unscrew—nothing to take apart and reassemble. The same lever that releases the blade adjusts it for close or medium shaving.

You can shave in 3 minutes

In 10 seconds you can renew the fine, keen edge of the AutoStrop Razor blade. It takes less than half a minute to dry the razor after using. With the AutoStrop Razor you can get a complete shave—cool and comfortable—all in 3 minutes' time.



Standard set consists of silver-plated, self-stropping razor selected leather strop twelve blades all in a neat leather case

On razors, strops, blades, etc., hereafter manufactured by us we shall apply the trade mark "Valet" in addition to the trade mark "AutoStrop" as an additional indication that they are the genuine products of the AutoStrop Safety Razor Co., New York.
